When you use one of these kinds of consumables while you are adjacent to your companion, you can grant the benefit to your companion instead of yourself. NOTES

CLIMBING / SWIMMING

A creature who has “climb” in their speed entry, or who gains the temporary ability to automatically climb, can climb across vertical and horizontal surfaces at full speed. Likewise, a creature who has “swim” in their speed entry, or who gains the temporary ability to automatically swim, can swim in liquid at full speed.

Creatures without those types of movement can still climb or swim when a rule allows them to move, but each square of climbing or swimming costs 2 squares of movement. If a surface is difficult to climb (for instance, a sheer cliff or ice-covered wall) or a liquid is hard to swim through (a raging river or whirlpool), the Director can call for a Might test. On a failure, a creature can't climb or swim but wastes no movement in the attempt. The Director can also impose other consequences to failure, such as being caught in the spinning current of a whirlpool.

Climbing other Creatures: You can attempt to climb a creature whose size is greater than yours. If the creature is willing, you can climb them without any trouble. If the creature is unwilling, you make the following test:

Power Roll + Might or Agility:

Roll Effect

≤11 You fail to climb the creature, and they can make a free strike against you.

12-16 You fail to climb the creature.

17+ You climb the creature.

While you climb or ride a creature, you gain an edge to melee abilities used against them. The creature can use a maneuver to attempt to knock you off, forcing you to make the following test:

Power Roll + Might or Agility:

Roll Effect

≤11 You fall off the creature into an unoccupied adjacent space of your choice, taking falling damage and landing prone as usual.

12-16 You slide down the creature into an unoccupied adjacent space of your choice and don't land prone.

17+ You continue to hold on to the creature.

If you are knocked prone while climbing or riding a creature, you fall and land prone in an adjacent space of your choice, taking damage as usual from the fall.

MANEUVERS

Any creature can take the following maneuvers, in addition to those listed in their stats:

- Aid Attack: Choose an adjacent enemy. The next ability power roll an ally makes against them before the start of your next turn has an edge.
- Catch Breath: Spend a Recovery.
- Claw Dirt: You use the Claw Dirt ability.
- Escape Grab: You use the Escape Grab ability while grabbed.
- Grab: You use the Grab ability.
- Hide: You become hidden from creatures who aren't observing you while you have cover or concealment from them.
- Knockback: You use the Knockback ability.
- Make or Assist a Test: Making or assisting a test is a maneuver in combat.
- Search for Hidden Creatures: Attempt to locate creatures hidden from you.
- Stand Up: You stand up from prone, ending that condition. Alternatively, you can use this maneuver to make an adjacent prone creature stand up.
- Use Consumable: Unless otherwise noted in its description, you can use this maneuver to activate a consumable treasure. A creature can use this maneuver to administer a consumable treasure that benefits the user either to herself or a willing adjacent creature.

DYING AND DEATH

When your Stamina is 0 or lower, you are dying. While dying, you can't take the Catch Breath maneuver in combat, and you are bleeding, and this condition can't be removed in any way until you are no longer dying. While you are dying, your allies can help you spend Recoveries in combat, and you can spend Recoveries out of combat as usual.

While your Stamina is lower than 0, if it reaches the negative of your winded value, you die. When you die, you can't be brought back to life without the use of a special powerful item such as a Scroll of Resurrection.

MOVEMENT

All squares adjacent to your character cost 1 movement to move into. No, there's no Pythagorean theorem on the grid. It's a game, don't overthink it.

Your hero can move freely through an ally's space. You can move through an enemy's space, but that space is difficult terrain. You can't stop moving in any other creature's space, including to make a strike or use a main action or maneuver while in that space and then continuing your move, unless that creature's size is two or more sizes greater or smaller than your own.

At the Director's discretion, you can be forced into the same space as another creature whose size is within 1 of yours, such as by falling down a narrow shaft with such a creature already at the bottom. When you are squeezed into the same space as another creature whose size is within 1 of yours, your ability rolls and tests take a bane.

Can't Exceed Speed: A single move or other effect can never allow a creature to move more squares than their speed, unless the effect states otherwise. For example, a creature with speed 5 might have that speed reduced to 2 by the slowed condition (see Conditions in Chapter 5: Classes). If an ally then targets them with an effect that allows them to move up to 3 squares, the creature can move only 2 squares because that's their current speed.

Can't Cut Corners: A creature can't move diagonally when doing so would involve passing through the corner of a wall or some other object that completely fills the corner between the creature's space and the space they are moving to. This rule applies only to moving past objects, not moving past other creatures.

SNEAKING

While you are hidden from another creature and not in combat, you can attempt to sneak—avoiding the senses of other creatures as you move around them in the open—to remain hidden. While sneaking, your speed is halved. To sneak, you make an Agility test using the Sneak skill with a difficulty set by the Director. If you succeed, you remain hidden during your movement. This test can use another characteristic at the Director's discretion, such as using Presence to blend in with a crowd on a packed city street.

BEASTHEART

Beasthearts and Magic Treasure

Consumables. Your companion can’t use every consumable, but with your help, they can benefit from an edible or drinkable consumable, such as a Healing Potion. While using a kit, your companion can also benefit from a consumable that enhances a weapon, such as a Lachomp Tooth. When you use one of these kinds of consumables while you are adjacent to your companion, you can grant the benefit to your companion instead of yourself. You must take the action type required to use the consumable; no action is required of your companion.

Trinkets. Your companion can’t use trinkets that are designed to be worn by bipeds (such as cloaks, masks, and hats) or require words or gestures to activate. However, your companion can benefit from one necklace, pendant, collar, or other trinket with the Neck keyword that doesn’t require any action to activate, such as a Necklace of the Bayou or one of the new magic trinkets presented in this document. You companion doesn’t need to wear their trinket around their neck: a condor might wear a necklace wrapped around a talon, and a gelatinous sphere might carry it suspended inside their body!

Leveled Items. Although your companion can’t wield a sword, they can benefit from a magic blade! When you wield and gain the benefits of a leveled weapon, armor, implement, or other item, your companion gains those same benefits as if they were wielding the treasure.

• Heroic Resource: Rampage

Your companion has a resource called rampage. Whenever you or your companion spends ferocity, your companion gains rampage equal to the ferocity spent. Your companion loses their rampage and its effects at the end of an encounter. Your companion doesn’t spend rampage to activate abilities. Instead, when your companion gains 8 rampage, they are rampaging. As your companion’s rampage increases, they gain the listed effects from the Rampage table. Effects are cumulative. Some Rampage effects are applied only if you are a specific level or higher, with the level of these effects noted in the Rampage table. | Rampage | Effect | |:=====|:=====| | 8 | At the end of each of your turns, your companion must use their Feral Strike ability as a free maneuver. You can’t willingly decrease the power roll outcome to a lower tier. For each ally damaged this way, you gain 2 surges, which you can use on this strike. | | 12 | Your companion has damage immunity equal to their Intuition score. | | 16 (lvl 4) | When your companion uses their Feral Strike ability, they deal extra damage equal to their Intuition score to each target. You gain 1 additional surge for each ally damaged this way. | | 20 (lvl 7) | As a free maneuver, your companion can increase their size up to size 2, or increase their size by 1 if their original size is already 2 or larger. This size increase lasts until your companion’s rampage ends or they use a free maneuver to end it. While your companion’s size is increased, they gain a +2 bonus to speed and stability, the potencies of their abilities increase by 1, and the size of their Feral Strike ability’s burst increases by 1. | | 24 (lvl 10) | When your companion increases their size, they can increase it up to size 3, or increase their size by 1 if their original size is already 3 or larger. Whenever they make a power roll while their size is increased this way, they can roll 3d10 and discard the lowest roll. |

• Kit: You can use a Kit

• Signature Class Ability: Covering Fire

• 3 Cost Class Ability: Herd the Sheep

• 5 Cost Class Ability: Rain of Fire

• Stamina: +21 Stamina

• Recoveries: +12 Recoveries

• 1 Skill Handle Animals

• 2 Exploration or Intrigue Skills Escape Artist Navigate

• Summon Choice: Companion

You gain the companionship of a wild animal that shares your travels. Your companion isn’t your pet—rather, they share a mystical bond with you, a bond that allows you to share your companion’s senses and primal instincts.

COMPANIONS IN COMBAT

Companion Stamina and Recoveries. Your companion's Stamina maximum equals your Stamina maximum. Your companion has no Recoveries. When an effect would allow your companion to spend a Recovery, your companion spends one of your Recoveries.

Companion Death. A companion can become dying at 0 Stamina and die at negative half their Stamina, just like a hero.

Companion Actions. Your companion is your ally, but they take their turn as a part of your turn. For the purpose of effects that end at the end of the companion's turn, or any other rules elements that depend on the start or end of creature's turn, the start and end of your turn is also the start and end of the companion's turn.

You and your companion each take your own move action. You can use one triggered action per round, which can be used by either you or your companion. Your main action and maneuver are split between you and your companion; if you take a main action, you can't take a maneuver but your companion can. If you take a maneuver, you can't take a main action but your companion can. Taking a main action doesn't prevent you or your companion from taking free maneuvers.

You and your companion share one turn during montage tests and similar scenes. Typically, you'll take this turn, but there may be circumstances when your companion does instead.

Ranged Free Strikes. Your companion doesn't have a ranged free strike.

Shared Maneuvers. When you or your companion use the Catch Breath, Escape Grab, Hide, or Stand Up maneuvers, your partner can use the same maneuver as a triggered free action.

Shared Abilities. You and your companion share some abilities, but not all of them. If a beastheart ability has the Beastheart keyword, it can be used by only the beastheart. If it has the Companion keyword, it can be used by only the companion. If an ability can be used by either you or your companion, the word "you" in the ability's text refers to whoever uses the ability, while the word "partner" refers to whoever didn't use the ability. Within a companion's stat block, the word "you" always refers to the beastheart. In all cases, phrases like "you both" and "you each" refer to you and your companion.

Shared Senses. While you are within 1 mile of each other, you and your companion can communicate telepathically as if you shared a language, although this communication uses vague images and feelings instead of words.

Shared Skills. Your companion has any skill you have, and vice versa. No matter what skills they possess, your companion can't take any action their physiology wouldn't allow (for instance, a wolf can't pick locks).

Shared Space. You and your companion can move freely through and stop in each other's spaces.

Shared Perks, Titles, and Complications. If you gain a benefit or drawback by earning a perk, a title, or a complication, your companion shares the benefit or drawback. Your companion can only be affected by benefits or drawbacks that logically affect an animal: for instance, an animal can't craft and therefore can't benefit from the Handy perk. If you're not sure what your companion can do, ask your Director.

Surges. Surges you and your companion gain are added to a surge pool you both can spend from. When an effect would grant 1 or more surges to both you and your companion, you only gain the surges once.

Changing Your Companion. As a respite activity, you can release your current companion, then gain a new companion of a different species or summon a companion you previously released.

One Hero. You and your companion count as one hero for determining the difficulty of combats, montage tests, and other challenges.

JUMPING

Whenever an effect allows you to move (including using the Advance move action), you can automatically long jump a number of squares up to your Might or Agility score (your choice; minimum 1 square) as part of that movement. The height of your jump is automatically 1 square as part of that movement.

If you want to jump even longer or higher than your baseline jump allows, make a Might or Agility test:

Power Roll + Might or Agility:

Roll Effect

≤11

You don't jump any farther than your baseline jump allows.

12-16

You jump 1 square longer and higher than your baseline jump allows.

17+

You jump 2 squares longer and higher than your baseline jump allows.

You can't jump farther or higher than the distance of the effect that allows you to move. You can't jump out of difficult terrain or damaging terrain.

The panther can jump up to a number of squares equal to their speed before using this ability. If they jump at least 1 square in this way, a target who has M < STRONG is knocked prone.

★ Mighty Spring

Whenever the panther takes the Advance move action or the Charge action, they can jump up to a number of squares equal to their speed in any direction, including vertically, as part of this movement.

Level 3 Panther Advancement Feature

★ Cat and Mouse

Whenever the panther makes a strike against a creature while rampaging, the panther can knock the target prone.

Level 6 Panther Advancement Feature

★ Single Bound

While the panther is rampaging, you can jump up to a number of squares equal to your speed as a free maneuver once on each of your turns.

Level 10 Panther Advancement Feature

★ Panther Spirit

While the panther is rampaging, you and the panther are invisible and can move through objects and terrain, which are difficult terrain for you both. A creature who ends their turn inside a solid object from moving this way is teleported to the last unoccupied space they previously occupied.

FALLING

When a creature falls 2 or more squares and lands on the ground, they take 2 damage for each square they fall (to a maximum of 50 damage) and land prone. A creature who falls can reduce the effective height of the fall by a number of squares equal to their Agility score (to a minimum of 0). Falling into liquid that is 1 square or more deep reduces the effective height of a fall by 4 squares (to a minimum of 0).

Falling is not forced movement, but being force moved downward is considered falling. Movement from falling doesn't provoke opportunity attacks.

FALLING ONTO ANOTHER CREATURE

A creature who falls and lands on another creature causes that creature to take the same damage from the fall. The falling creature then lands prone in the nearest unoccupied space of their choice. If the falling creature's size is greater than the Might score of the creature they land on, that creature is knocked prone.
